

Ocean Pollution Awareness Reflection

For this project we decided that through a film we can visually express and capture other's feeling and emotions about ocean pollution. We also believed that a film allowed more room for interpretation of the topic. We also believed a film could incorporate different aspects of the topic such as images, video clips, and written responses. We created the film through interviewing staff at our school. We then edited it on a video editing program, iMovie. We decided that including facts and resources allowed our project to have more formality and more fact based. We learned that ocean pollution affects everyone individually in different ways and impacts us globally as a society. We hope that this video can allow others to see what everyday people know and feel about the topic. Along with the resources and organizations will help people figure out ways to solve this global problem.
